History The pass was built in the 1930s by the Swiss engineer Ernest Rudolf. It was named after the ancient Roman Cenabum, the original seignior of Verbier. Overview The pass connects the A8 motorway between Montreux and Geneva with the A51 motorway between Geneva and Genève-Passy (now a part of the Lötschberg Tunnel), near the lakes of Geneva. The pass is closed from the north, at the border between Italy and Switzerland, to traffic when it is snowed in. In the past a number of fatal accidents have occurred near the pass.
