Laser Droplets is a mixtures of shoot 'em up (bullet hell), arcade styled (like Geometry Wars) and 2D game. You pilot a mighty laser ship, which can move in any direction and attack incoming spaceships with its powerful laser beam. The objective is to destroy the stage's boss ship before it destroys your own. You can attack enemies from the front, side, and behind. There's a maximum of three targets and a limited number of shots for each target. If you hit the boss, it'll flee and go to the next stage. The boss will fly into the screen and attack you, so you have to shoot him first. You are the most important asset in the game. You start the game with a limited amount of shots, but you can fire as often as you like. The enemies will fire as you fire your laser, but they have a limited number of shots. You get more shots if you aim for a larger part of the boss. The hazards will fire shots at you. If you hit it, it'll explode. If you get too close, the laser will fire a spike at you. If it hits you, it'll leave a homing beak, that will attack you every time you fire your laser. You can also fire your laser to destroy the hazards. In the tutorial, you will learn how to use the lasers and how to approach enemies. You will also get bonus points for killing enemies and you will earn points for destroying hazards. The stages are set to be challenging, since they all have a boss at the end. The controls work as follows: Up: Fire the laser Right: Move the ship Down: Switch ships The ship's laser fires once per tick. Bosses are no pushovers. You can upgrade your ship, there are three items to upgrade: speed, armor, and lasers. You unlock new ships as you progress, and new ships have their own special characteristics. The lasers can be upgraded, but you can only select three. The game consists of 16 mini stages, each with a unique boss.

Features You can play it using a keyboard, mouse, or controller. You can press Space to fire your laser. You can move your spaceship. Automatic firing. Automatic dodging when enemies fire their shots. Points system. You can destroy hazards. The
