Each item in the list has two checkboxes and a link. If the user clicks on the link, the master list has a clickEvent handler setup on it. Once the clickEvent handler is triggered, it needs to return a value to the form (this.checked). Anyone done this before? It may be that it just can't be done or that I need to use a different approach to accomplish this task. A: In your handler you could use the [event] parameter to pass any information to the handler and then use this to reference the Form Forms.myForm.addEventListener("click", function(event, columnData) { // use columnData here to reference things on the form });
